

Hey Roman!

Your comic is super thoughtful and detailed! I can tell you put a lot of care into making sure it's both useful and realistic for that age group. I really like how you broke down the steps into calm, speak, and choose. It makes it feel really simple and repeatable, which is perfect for younger kids who need clear routines to follow. The use of visuals like the traffic light and the speech template is a great idea too, they make the emotions and actions way easier to understand.

I also thought it was really cool how you connected the comic to your own work experience. Which again makes it feel more grounded and relatable and shows what can actually happen with kids, rather than just theory.

One suggestion I have is maybe finding little ways to make the comic playful or engaging, since kiddos around that age range learn a lot through fun and setting good examples. Even something as simple as making the characters a bit silly or exaggerating their expressions might help keep them hooked. But overall, your comic has a clear structure and has a lot of heart behind it! I think it'll be super effective! Looking forward to the final product!